

Forensic Accounting and Investigations

What does it involve?

Forensic accounting involves a wide range of specialist activities including financial, fraud and corruption investigations.

How we can help

Axiom's financial investigation services are used by regulators, corporations and higher education providers and our fraud and corruption and risk management investigations are often utilised by internal audit departments, insurers and insured to assist with fidelity claims.

Financial investigations are undertaken on behalf of our clients to identify the accounting issues and provide advice in the assessment and quantification of claims for economic loss.

At Axiom Forensics we have the experience and knowledge to ensure these delicate investigations and matters are undertaken appropriately and confidentially. We are able to:

- Apply accounting and other specialised skills for the purposes of discreet investigations.
- Utilise our team of data analysts on matters that require the analysis of large or complex data issues, enabling our clients to address problems efficiently and effectively.
- Provide advice, recommendations or reports on our findings in a manner most appropriate to the nature of the assignment.
- Assist in criminal and civil matters through our extensive experience in fraud and corruption investigations.
